Business boost as council sets up task force

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

A SPECIAL task force is to be set up to help Ashford's businesses weather the economic storm.

The move comes in a bid to protect the town's economy amid mounting doom and gloom and fears of a double-dip recession.

At a council meeting last week, leader Peter Wood confirmed he had hired Graham Galpin, former chairman of the Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce, to spearhead the cross-party group.

Cllr Wood said: "The cabinet is firmly of the belief that the borough council should not adopt the traditional passive municipal attitude to economic recession. Instead, we believe the borough council must adopt a pro-active approach. This view is unanimously supported by the chief executive and management team.

"The cross-party member and officer task group will identify how Ashford Borough Council can best help local businesses to weather the economically troubled times ahead.

"Although the task group's focus is likely to be on small and medium sized businesses, it is open to the task group to make suggestion with regard to aiding both large businesses and groups of individuals - particularly the elderly." It will report its findings to the cabinet.

FIRE

House saved by fire alarm

FIRE crews were called out to a blaze in Tenterden on Sunday afternoon after a pan caught alight in a kitchen on Ashford Road. The house was empty at the time but a neighbour called 999 after hearing the fire alarm - a move firefighters say saved the house from being destroyed.

PLANNING

Have your say on town plans

RESIDENTS are being asked to provide their views on revisions to a planning document which highlights potential sites' future development. The Urban Sites and Infrastructure Development Plan Document (DPD) will determine development up to 2017. Contact the council for details.

Community so close to win in Kent Village of the Year race

BRABOURNE came within a whisker of being named Kent Village of the Year - but despite missing out still picked up one of the prestigious competition's top awards.

The competition, organised by Action with Communities in Rural Kent, received entries from across the county, with one overall winner and four individual categories up for grabs - social action, transport, economic, development and environment.

Brabourne scooped the economy title with judges heaping praise on it for its "thriving economy with a wealth of pubs, shops and businesses".

But hopes of landing the top prize were dashed when the judges awarded the Kent Village of the Year title to Elham - between Canterbury and Folkestone.

Competition organiser, Miranda Hayes, said "This was a fantastic competition this year and the judges did a fantastic job. It was very close between all the villages and it was really difficult to make a final decision."

Other category winners saw Allhallows in Medway winning the social action prize, a community mini-bus scheme landing Stockbury in Maidstone the transport prize, and Elham winning the environment award. Allhallows was named best newcomer.

The winners were presented with their awards at a special presentation last Thursday at Dunkirk Village Hall.

HEALTH

Postcode lottery for treatment of people with eating disorders

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A MAJOR review into the county's eating disorder support is under way after health chiefs admitted the current service was "inadequate".

In a paper discussed by the Health Overview and Scrutiny committee at County Hall on Friday, NHS Kent and Medway outlined the work being carried out to ensure vulnerable people suffering from disorders such as anorexia and bulimia had the support they needed.

The review was launched after specialist mental health commissioners in Kent and Medway admitted the service was "inadequate in both clinical and financial terms".

"There is a disparity across the county in terms of access to services, waiting lists and a disproportionate amount of funding spent on out-of-area placements," said an NHS spokesman. "Conducting a draft options appraisal has allowed the stakeholder steering group to focus on a more effective use of the resources in order to provide a quicker, more responsive service."

Specialist mental health commissioners in the county said they needed to identify a model of care that would enable timely access to support.

"Improving access to high quality, responsive, community-based primary care specialist nurses is a key objective," said the NHS spokesman.

Currently there are four primary care specialist nurses who offer early intervention on eating disorders for people aged 14 upwards in east Kent, Dartford and Medway, but there are no specialist nurses in Maidstone. This primary care liaison service has an overall capacity of 40 patients. From January to December, 2010, the service saw almost 80 patients.

Outpatient services are available in Maidstone for sufferers in west Kent and in various locations in east Kent, which saw just over 1,700 patients between April, 2010, and March, 2011.

Maidstone is the only place in Kent to provide inpatient treatment; the Red House caters for just six people. For severe eating disorder cases, where inpatient provision is needed with interventional feeding, patients are sent out of area to Cygnet and Maudsley hospitals in London.

In 2010-11, 15 patients were sent out of area, three due to lack of beds in Maidstone.

Feedback from people with eating disorders, GPs, and NHS staff, found the main issues for patients was the waiting times for treatment and the inequality in access to services across Kent.

Patients said they felt primary care practitioners needed more education into eating disorders to slow down the fast referral service and that more support was needed in the community.

Feedback from the first part of the review found good progress had been made, but a committee group is due to be set up between KCC and Medway council's Health Overview and Scrutiny committees to consider options for an improved countywide service.

INADEQUATE: Support is lacking, both clinically and financially, for those with eating disorders

The UK has the highest rate of eating disorders in Europe. These include anorexia and bulimia.

National eating disorder organisation Anorexia and Bulimia Care (ABC) said recent figures suggested that one in 100 women has a clinically diagnosed eating disorder.

The charity said nationally the number of cases of people under 18 being admitted to hospital in the past four years had increased by almost 10 per cent. Figures included almost 450 children aged under 10.

ANIMALS

Hairy pigs Si and Dave live up to their cuddly, food-loving namesakes

A PAIR of porkers brought to a wildlife centre to replace the famous Tamworth Two have been named after the Hairy Bikers.

The woolly-coated Mangalitza pigs at the Rare Breeds Centre in Woodchurch, near Ashford, have been named Si and Dave after the famous bearded TV cooks.

The names were chosen by Emily Hoare from Brighton, who won a competition to find names for the animals.

Si and Dave are actually a sow and boar who have produced five piglets, but the names were thought ideal by users of the Canterbury Oast Trust, the charity which runs the centre and cares for people with learning disabilities.

Spokeswoman Nikki Sara said: "We had some superb suggestions – including Porky's and Bessie's and Fluffy and Scruffy – but we thought Si and Dave were just perfect. Just like our Si and Dave, the Hairy Bikers love everything to do with food, are popular, distinctive and cuddly."

Emily said: "I have always loved

DOUBLE TROUBLE: Hairy Bikers Si and Dave, and pigs Si and Dave

the Hairy Bikers and there was something about the new Mangalitza pigs that made me think of them. Maybe it was because they were so hairy."

Farm manager Davy McColm said: "Si and Dave will be moving into their new sty shortly. Tamworth Towers was formerly the home of Butch and Sundance.

"It was one large apartment with a field attached.

"We are turning it into a home suitable for the whole family – Si, Dave and their five piglets.

"We are thinking of calling their new home Mangalitza Manor."

The Tamworth Two hit the headlines when they escaped while being unloaded from a lorry at an abattoir in Malmesbury, Wiltshire in January, 1998.

The pigs, later named Butch and Sundance after Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, were on the run for more than a week, and the search for them caused a huge media sensation.

After they were captured they lived at the Rare Breeds Centre. Butch was put to sleep aged 13 on October 8, 2010, after becoming seriously ill.

Sundance, aged 14, suffering from arthritis, and "much quieter" after his sister's death, was put down on May 23, 2011.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Cross-Channel crime

KENT Police have signed a co-operation agreement with their French counterparts in a bid to crack down on cross-Channel terror plots, drug smuggling, and people trafficking.

Chief Constable Ian Learmonth travelled to France last week to sign the deal, which extends an initiative between the two forces to ensure the Channel is not used to evade justice or spirit away the ill-gotten gains of a criminal lifestyle.

Officers target counter-terrorism, drug supply, people trafficking and illegal immigration.

➔ Thanksgiving for Dilley

A THANKSGIVING service will take place at Worcester Cathedral to celebrate the life of Graham Dilley.

The former Kent and England Ashes hero died aged 52 on October 5 from cancer. His funeral will be a family ceremony, with the cathedral service on November 9 the chance for family, friends, players and former cricket associates to pay their respects.

➔ Lap-dancing research

A University of Kent academic is to spend a year looking at whether lap-dancing clubs make some people feel unsafe in cities at night.

The research will help council licensing officers and community safety groups make decisions on the suitability of the clubs.

Professor Phil Hubbard said: "No-one has explored the impact lap dancing clubs have on the nightlife of British cities."

EMPLOYMENT

Council defends jobs figures as thousands are 'moved not axed'

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

COUNTY Hall chiefs have issued a stinging rebuke to claims by union bosses that the authority had seen the highest number of job losses across all English councils.

Cabinet member for business, strategy, performance and health reform at Kent County Council, Cllr Roger Gough, said figures published by the GMB showing 3,107 cuts at KCC since the general election were "inaccurate".

He said the union had failed to take into account the number of school staff who were moved from KCC to academy employment when schools chose to convert to independent status and out of local education authority control.

"Let's get the facts right, the figures published by the GMB on KCC job losses are inaccurate and without context," said Cllr Gough.

"The actual total number of staff in schools reduced by 3,147 for the year April, 2010, to April, 2011. The majority of this number – 2,202 members of staff – is almost entirely as a result of some schools in Kent moving to academy status and therefore no longer part of the council."

Cllr Gough said so far 945 posts outside of schools had gone through retirement, job moves, not filling vacant posts, and job losses.

"This also takes into account use of fewer casual staff. This recognises that we have to make savings in difficult financial times," he said.

Earlier this week, the GMB union released figures from the Local Government Association (LGA) which suggested there had been 3,107 job losses since the general election in May, 2010, through not filling vacancies and natural wastage.

The union claimed, based on LGA figures, there had been a 12 per cent drop in workforce.

Despite KCC stating that the majority of the 'losses' related to school staff transferring to academies, the union said the situation was still a concern.

National secretary, Brian Strutton, said: "Council workers and their families are paying a terrible price for the Government's austerity drive. These job losses are on top of two years of pay freezes and cuts to conditions and pensions. "Care workers, refuse collectors, street cleaners, social workers and all the essential frontline council staff are bearing the brunt while those at the top wring their hands and look on.

"How much more are people expected to take before someone admits the economy is on its knees and we should be supporting working people not sacrificing them?

"Many of the job losses have come from not filling vacancies that would have gone to the almost one million young people out of work."

From 3 January 2012, the current emissions standards are changing and more vehicle types will be affected.

Boris calls for suspension of toll charges during Olympic Games

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

LONDON Mayor Boris Johnson has demanded the Government either delay the proposed Dartford toll hike or scrap charges during the Olympic Games.

He stressed the planned rise from £1.50 to £2.50 next spring would discourage drivers from using the tunnel, instead moving congestion to other parts of the county and the Blackwall Tunnel.

"During the Olympic Games we are going to need businesses and Londoners to consider alternative ways of working or travelling," he said, "and heading for the Dartford Crossing will become a major consideration for drivers in the east of the city.

"That is why I have asked the Government to give serious thought to delaying their proposed increase or even better suspending the charge to use the crossing during the Olympics."

In a letter to ministers, the mayor said he welcomed proposals to suspend charging when long queues built up, but suggested the plan be amended so the suspension was triggered at a shorter length queue. He also backed another Thames crossing.

Mr Johnson's comments followed a petition by a group of Kent Tory MPs fiercely opposing the proposed increase in toll charges. Led by Dartford MP Gareth Johnson, the 11 MPs, including Chatham and Aylesford's Tracey Crouch, Gravesham's Adam Holloway, and Gillingham and Rainham's Rehman Chishti, outlined their opposition in a letter submitted to the Department for Transport.

Mr Johnson said: "All the MPs that signed this letter had similar concerns regarding the current proposals for the Dartford Crossing. We all realise the impact the charges have on our constituents, local businesses and the surrounding area."

The borough's Labour Party submitted a petition to Mr Johnson with hundreds of signatures from the public opposing the toll hikes.

Labour shadow leader at Dartford council Geoff Prout said: "We should instead be looking at practical ways of tackling queueing, pollution and congestion at the crossing by using the best available collection technology to scrap toll booths. Pressure on Dartford also needs to be relieved through a firm commitment to a second crossing."

Plans for a Third Thames Crossing from Gravesham to Chadwell in Essex have been put forward as a "preferred option" by Kent County Council, but have sparked strong opposition from Gravesham council, which claimed it would destroy greenbelt land.

An automatic number plate recognition device is due to be introduced by 2013, so toll booths can be removed and traffic allowed to flow freely through the crossing.

HARD MILES: Charges are set to rise

The Labour government went back on a promise to scrap tolls once the Queen Elizabeth II Bridge at the Dartford Crossing, built under a Private Finance Initiative, was paid for in 2002.

ENERGY

Coastal towns could be hub for electricity link to Europe

By Marijke Cox
marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

HUGE undersea power cables allowing Britain to import and export electricity to mainland Europe could be run from Kent's coastline.

The county already plays host to the first direct current electricity link from the UK to another country, with a high-voltage cable stretching 260km under the North Sea from the Isle of Grain to the Netherlands, allowing electricity to be transferred in both directions.

Its development cost £500 million and was funded commercially, independent from the National Grid.

The Government is now in discussions over future undersea cable projects which would help eliminate any energy shortfall in Britain.

As the closest area to mainland Europe, the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) said it was likely the companies would select parts of Kent for projects.

Richborough, between Thanet and Sandwich, has already been earmarked as a location for an undersea interconnector (the cable connecting two countries), with planners behind a green energy park looking at submarine cabling to link the UK with Belgium to import and export power.

The National Grid has pledged to invest £400m in capital costs to the project.

The planned undersea interconnector, combined with the Thanet offshore wind grid connection, which will be at the park in Richborough, will help deliver electricity to more than one million households in the South East.

A DECC spokesman said Kent's position so close to mainland Europe, would make it an obvious location for future projects. There are currently 11 existing, planned and future projects, with one of those the Isle of Grain interconnector.

Of those being planned, several involve connections to France and Belgium.

The DECC spokesman said: "I think this is a possibility. Projects are all in the feasibility stages and companies have not yet specified locations, but Kent is the closest county to mainland Europe, which would put it at an advantage.

"We can't pre-empt where companies will choose to run the interconnectors and this is a commercial decision, but Kent could well be an area selected."

Energy regulator Ofgem conducted a study looking into the future of undersea interconnectors.

A spokesman said: "The British electricity market has limited interconnection with other markets, but this is expected to increase significantly in the decade ahead.

"The overall aim of our policy is to maximise the efficient use of existing and planned interconnection by ensuring that users can respond efficiently to price differentials and that the mix of capacity products provide for competition."

MP will tackle big issues of funding and skills

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

KEY issues affecting the economy of the county are set to be addressed at the upcoming Business Week Live event by Gordon Marsden, the shadow minister for further education, skills and regional growth.

Mr Marsden, Labour MP for Blackpool South, has been looking into the issues faced by seaside towns – of particular relevance for the exhibition and conference which takes place at Dover Exhibition Centre on Wednesday, October 26.

He said he will also be addressing key issues affecting the county – such as bank lending policy for small and medium enterprises (SMEs), and the impact of the loss of jobs at Pfizer.

"One of my responsibilities as a shadow minister is skills, and that is a subject I shall look at," he said. "Tourism is a key issue and in the last Government I worked on the Sea Change initiative which has been well received in Dover.

"There is the whole issue of growth across the south east of England as well. There is a misconception the South East is prosperous and does not need a leg-up, but when you look at the statistics for places such as the Medway Towns, this is quite clearly not the case.

"Here, again, we are coming back to the issues which affect seaside towns.

"SMEs are a vital part of the economy and responsible for much potential growth. The issue of access to finance for such businesses is important.

"There is a current mantra about getting banks to do lending but in my neck of the woods it's not really happening.

"There are some new sources for funding outside of London, but I feel these could be administered on a more local level. Some of the banks do not have a proper depth of local expertise.

"One of the things I am currently looking at is new funding sources."

Mr Marsden praised the extension of the high-speed rail link to Deal and Sandwich. "I want to talk about the impact of the job losses at Pfizer, as well," he said. "That is a very serious issue – not just the job losses, but the loss to the local economy in other ways."

FUTURE: MP Gordon Marsden will be addressing key business issues

STARTING UP

Opportunities still out there, says Chamber

DESPITE the state of the economy there are still opportunities for entrepreneurs to launch new companies, according to Peter Hobbs of Channel Chamber, who will be speaking at Business Week Live.

His group represents companies across the east Kent region and is gaining in influence across the county.

Mr Hobbs said: "Even in the current uncertain economic climate, it is still a great time to consider starting your own business, and there is plenty of help and support available to get new entrepreneurs up and running.

"Along with financial support from the Government via the new Enterprise Allowance scheme, Kent Channel Chamber has recently launched local Enterprise Clubs in Dover and Folkestone for those looking to create their own business.

"There can be no doubt that new business start-ups are a vital part of the Kent economy, and small business success is where our economic growth will be rekindled.

"By working together and buying local wherever possible, the wider business community across the county can help to support the success of new businesses – they are, after all, our customers, employers and suppliers of the future.

OPTIMISTIC: Peter Hobbs says now is the time to start your own business

"This is where Kent Channel Chamber's Enterprise Clubs are providing a valuable service. Not only do they allow new entrepreneurs to meet and share ideas and experiences, but they also provide an excellent forum for established businesses to add their valuable advice and experience.

"We are keen for more local businesses in all sectors to get involved in this initiative, and help us to encourage and support new start-ups."

CRIME

Teen gang who stole top-of-the range cars

A GANG who stole high-value cars across the county have been locked up.

They have been sentenced to a total of more than 10 years behind bars after pleading guilty to burglary.

Throughout December, 2010, and January, 2011, a number of homes across Kent were broken into and car keys stolen while the residents slept.

The gang then took the cars from the owners' driveways. Vehicles worth more £350,000 were taken. Two were also stolen from addresses in Surrey.

Cars stolen included: Two Mini Coopers and a BMW from Chatham; two BMWs and two Mercedes from addresses in Maidstone; a BMW and a Volvo from Bexley; a Porsche and a Mini Cooper from Swanley.

Following a failed attempt in Dartford, a Mini Cooper with false number plates was recovered, and the true identity of the car was confirmed as one of the Minis taken from Walderslade in Chatham. The car pro-

MIGRATION

Gurkhas are 'most self-reliant group in the UK'

By James Reid

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

WORKING-AGE Gurkhas are the most economically active and self-reliant social group in Britain.

That's the findings of the first study on Gurkha settlement and integration in the UK.

They are also outward-looking, with almost 80 per cent considering proficiency in English and having children in education, employment and training as most important. Seventy-one per cent are involved in voluntary work in their communities.

The South East Strategic Partnership for Migration-funded study was conducted by researcher Nina Gurung at the University of Kent, who surveyed 100 Gurkha men and women from Kent, Aldershot and Farnborough. These areas have the largest Gurkha settlements in the UK.

Kent is home to the 2nd Battalion Royal Gurkha Rifles, based at Shorncliffe, Folkestone, and nearly half of the soldiers from the Maidstone-based 36 Engineers Regiment are Queen's Gurkha Engineers.

TROOPERS: Gurkha soldiers

A total of 42 Gurkha soldiers from the county are being forced to take compulsory redundancy.

The study also found that employment rates among Gurkha males and females are "extraordinarily" high with 95.1 per cent for under 60s males and 92.6 per cent for under 60s females. Some 92.5 per cent of males and 61.3 per cent of females are in full-time work.

Reliance on housing benefit is mostly confined to older veterans due to low income. Some 80 per cent of over 60s were on pension credits.

Ms Gurung said that since Gurkha settlement began in 2004, clusters are now emerging in the UK, with affordable housing and neighbourhood safety the important factors when choosing a settlement area.

She said: "Most Gurkhas are settled in mainly British areas (55 per cent) and some in mixed Nepalese and British areas (27 per cent).

"Most Kent-based Gurkhas live in mainly British areas. The main universal services accessed by Gurkhas are health services (100 per cent) and children's education services (75 per cent); in large Gurkha settlement areas, this is likely to put pressure on relevant service providers."

A SPECIES of bumblebee which became extinct in Britain more than 20 years ago is preparing for its return to Kent.

The short-haired bumblebee was last recorded at Dungeness in 1988, and attempts to bring the bees back from New Zealand last year to reintroduce them in the UK proved unsuccessful.

Their decline was due to agricultural changes and the subsequent loss of flower-rich wild meadows.

But a Natural England-funded project, supported by the RSPB, the Bumblebee Conservation Trust and Hymettus Ltd, is now preparing essential habitat for the return of the insect.

Around 30 healthy queen bees will be brought over from Sweden for disease screening in spring next year.

BACK: Short-haired bumblebee

Preparations have been made at the RSPB's Dungeness reserve and farmland across Romney Marsh to create ideal conditions for the species to flourish.

Project leader Dr Nikki Gamman said: "Thanks to focused conservation efforts in Kent and East Sussex we are starting to see some of our rarest species spreading locally," she said.

"To create the right conditions for the short-haired bumblebees we have been working with farmers to encourage the pollen and nectar-rich wild flowers bumblebees rely on."

Bumblebees are essential in the pollination of plants and play an important part in the production of crops.

England's rarest bee, the shrill carder bee, has returned to Dungeness's RSPB reserve after a 25-year absence, and the large garden bumblebee has come back after 10 years.

The RSPB has been working with farmers in the area to create wildflower-rich habitats ready for the reintroduction of the short-haired bumblebee.

Dungeness reserve will be celebrating the bumblebee with a series of events in 2012.

CHARITY

Ex-top cop on a disaster zone mission of mercy

By Steve Knight

steve.knight@archant.co.uk

DURING his time with the British Transport Police, retired Chief Superintendent David Hatcher faced the horrors of both the Paddington and Potters Bar rail crashes.

A total of 38 people were killed and hundreds more injured in the accidents, with the 61-year-old Maidstone resident one of the many emergency services personnel on the ground helping to deal with scenes of utter devastation.

But more than a decade after Paddington, Mr Hatcher continues to put his people skills to good use by supporting disaster victims worldwide through the ShelterBox charity.

"I've always had a desire to help people affected by disasters and ShelterBox is a practical way of doing that," he said.

"The major difference between train crashes and incidents like the Haiti earthquake is that the majority of people in crashes get their lives back in no time at all. It will take years for Haiti to recover, if it does."

Mr Hatcher has been to Haiti and the Philippines for ShelterBox, and recently returned from a two-week charity mission in the Brazilian city of Rio de Janeiro, which in April suffered severe flooding and landslides after receiving more than five times the usual rainfall.

The former Kent Police officer was part of a team helping displaced people by giving out survival packs containing a tent capable of withstanding a hurricane, thermal blankets, tools, colouring sets for children, cooking equipment, and more.

"When you're there, the majority of the time you're just getting on with the job," said Mr Hatcher. "It's no good feeling sorry and miserable for people because you're there to give them some hope, but when you're not with them it's emotional and I've shed tears on many an occasion."

"Those we help are absolutely knocked out by the gesture and can't conceive that someone has donated money to help them. Just when they think their world has ended they are given new optimism, and you can't describe their gratitude."

"Sadly the demand often outstrips the supply and you have to prioritise who you give the boxes to. The hardest thing is to turn people away; it's the worst decision anyone can possibly be asked to make."

World Cup ultimate goal for county's top football flickers

By Joe Bill

joe.bill@archant.co.uk

KENT'S finest Subbuteo table football players head to the National League championships this weekend knowing that a good performance could secure them a place in the England World Cup team.

Flickers from the Kent Invicta team will be up against the cream of British Subbuteo talent as they battle it out for league glory and a shot in the international tournament.

Subbuteo was originally invented and produced in Tunbridge Wells in the 1940s, but has spread across the globe to such an extent that it has been officially named a sport rather than a game since 2010.

At the height of its popularity during the 1970s, there were more than 300 replica teams available to play with, and it is believed that 90 per cent of boys in the UK owned a set.

The current Kent set-up can boast some of Britain's top players with the Invicta team being home to the current top junior player, 10-year-old Coen Townsend, as well as the number one female player Maria Carmo. Also on-board is Miguel Pereira, who is considered to be one of England's top flickers and is currently in the world's top 100 players.

GOAL: Coen Townsend in action

On one weekend every season the premier players meet at the British Gas Energy Academy in Leicester, and fight it out to see who is England's finest finger footballer.

This year, the usual format of a knockout tournament has been replaced by a series of leagues played over Saturday and Sunday, October 15-16.

Where players finish in those leagues determine who has qualified for the World Cup teams for men, women, veterans, youth and juniors.

Coen Townsend has already gained some World Cup experience at junior level after thrashing team Germany 10-0 at a recent international tournament and is looking to progress to the youth level squad.

Much like the real game, there is plenty of glamour with the table football teams as they head off to tournaments both in Europe and further afield.

In fact the Kent Invicta team were represented at the Bologna International Major in Italy just four months ago.

At this year's event, the top leagues receive sponsorship and every division winner gets a trophy. Promotion and relegation will apply ahead of next year tournament, so players can aim to advance through the leagues in time for the World Cups in 2012 and 2014.

LAND AND SEA: The Night Train was loaded onto special ferries to make the Channel crossing

The first train service from Dover to France

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

SEVENTY-FIVE years ago this week, a new train ferry made its inaugural crossing from Dover to France, launching the only direct rail link from Britain to the Continent.

Surviving for 44 years, the Night Ferry, an international sleeper train, was carried across the Channel on three specially designed vessels, providing dignitaries, VIPs and even spies with plush journeys from London to Paris and later Brussels, while they slept.

Reports also suggest that Adolf Hitler demanded the dock at Dunkirk remain intact during World War Two so he could travel to the UK on the Night Ferry.

The fleet of blue-coloured sleeper cars, belonging to La Compagnie des Wagons-Lits – operator of the famous Orient Express – travelled from London Victoria to Dover where they were carried across the Channel to Dunkirk on specially built ferries before continuing on to Paris.

Each overnight train carried up to five and sometimes six sleeping cars.

A special dock was constructed at Dover to allow the ships to load and unload their cargo of railway vehicles at any time, regardless of the tide.

When the train was loaded onto the ferry, the cars were split up equally to ensure the vessels maintained their balance at sea.

But in 1980, the pressure

ABOARD: Anniversary book tells the story of the Night Ferry of advances in overseas travel saw the final nail in the coffin for the luxurious Night Ferry.

This year sees the 75th anniversary of its launch and to mark the occasion, the International Railway Preservation Society (IRPS) has published a book called Night Ferry 1936-1980.

Illustrated with unpublished photographs and memorabilia, it will complete the story of the lavish mode of transport which catered for the rich and famous.

Mike Collins, from the IRPS, said the organisation had searched for new accounts and never-before-seen pictures.

"The significant part is that we have information from both England and France, and this book is being published in French and English," he said.

"We have accounts from people who travelled on the last run in 1980 and those who worked on the trains and ferries. The new train was in effect Britain's only direct link with the Continent and was to run until October, 1980, apart from the years 1939 until 1947 when World War Two brought the service to a temporary halt."

The Night Ferry ran as usual on September 3, 1939, but the French sleeper cars and crews were returned to France and the service suspended.

In 1947 the service resumed from Paris and then in both directions between France and the UK. In 1957, a through sleeping car from London to Brussels was added to the service and in 1967 a link to Basle, although this was withdrawn soon after.

Just over a decade later, the Night Ferry, however, ceased altogether.

Mr Collins said: "It stopped service in 1980. Other transport was developing; plans for the Channel Tunnel were moving forward; and the age of the equipment was against it."

The IRPS book is being launched at Dover Museum on October 19 and at the port of Dunkirk on October 21.

DFDS Seaways, the current operator on the Dover to Dunkirk route is supporting the event, and the IRPS would also like to reach members of the public in and around Dover associated with the ferry dock, train ferries and the Night Ferry train service.

To get involved email mike.collins@irps-wl.org.uk. Night Ferry 1936-1980 is priced at £17.99.

Government's poor bill of health

Mike Eddy, a governor at health watchdog Kent LINK, fears proposals in the new Health and Social Care Bill will leave the health service with a bitter pill to swallow

THE last 12 months have been a roller-coaster ride for health service professionals and for those of us who keep a watching brief on the NHS.

The Government published its Health and Social Care Bill soon after stitching the Coalition together.

Its proposals bore no relation to anything either the Conservatives or the Lib-Dems had said on health before the election.

Doctors and nurses attacked the first draft of the bill. Then the Government seemed to have a change of heart and set up a 'listening exercise'. That produced some sensible changes and earlier this year I wrote in this paper that the future of the NHS looked less worrying.

Now it seems that whatever was heard through the listening exercise has gone in one ear of Government and out the other.

As I write, the House of Lords is debating the Health and Social Care Bill. Crossbench peers like Lord David Owen and Lib-Dem peers led by Baroness Shirley Williams have joined with Labour peers to oppose the bill and to propose the establishment of a committee to examine the Government's proposals in detail. That will at least delay the progress of the bill, but it will not necessarily stop it.

The bill, as currently framed, would remove the secretary of state for health's power over the National Health Service – a return to the original form of the bill. In other words the NHS would no longer be a national body responsible to national politicians who can be judged on their performance at the ballot box.

The Government claims it wants to see more local decision making in the health system; and there is nothing wrong with that, indeed there's a lot of good in it.

But by removing the powers of the secretary of state there will be no-one to maintain a national overview of the system. Inspection powers will be transferred to the Care Quality Commission, though that body is already creaking under the weight of its existing responsibilities.

Of course, we are dealing with a bill, not with an Act of Parliament, so it should be possible to change things as the bill is subject to scrutiny in the Houses of Parliament.

However, uniquely, other proposals in the bill are being put into action right now.

The primary care trusts which used to work out what medical services were needed for their local area are being disbanded.

The consortia of local GPs who are supposed to take over are being set up – before the bill becomes law. That is denial of Parliament's rights. And more importantly, it is a denial of everyone's rights as voters.

Uniquely, proposals in the bill are being put into action right now

The Health and Social Care Bill does not reflect the policies of either of the parties that form the Government, and yet the proposals are being put into place before the bill has been passed, let alone before being signed into law by the Queen.

Whatever happens this week in Parliament, our NHS is at risk of being broken up. Commentators in the media have compared what is happening in health to the privatisation of the railways.

If the health service goes the same way, that'll be good news for a handful of businessmen and their bankers and bad news for the rest of us.

KOS COMMENT

Food for thought for the health service

WHILE clinical treatment in hospitals is of course a top priority, one of the simplest and most effective forms of care – a healthy, decent meal – has great importance.

No-one denies that NHS staff are under increasing pressure, but this shouldn't mean denying elderly people the basic right of having a good meal.

Kent's hospitals were not the worst in binning untouched food, but the figure is still too high. It needs to be reduced, not only because it's a waste of money the NHS doesn't have, but food is one of the simplest ways of helping a patient's recovery.

Gurkhas offering an example for us all

JUST weeks after a defence minister criticised the Gurkha community for overwhelming his constituency, the brave Nepalese brigade have been hailed as the most self-reliant, hard-working group in Britain. Let's hope others take a leaf out of their book and show that pride these soldiers are so respected for.

A blind eye to our black past

THERE was a recent article in KoS (October 9), headlined 'Black history celebrations cultural focus'.

It stated this 'annual festival, which is held nationally, celebrates the diverse cultures and traditions that have made the UK the multicultural society it is'. It then went on to list some events in Medway – and only in Medway – which are all cultural.

But this is supposed to be Black History Month. Africans do have a history, contrary to what most people believe.

And not only in Africa, but here in the UK; our first written and archaeological records of Africans here, those of the African regiment which was part of the conquering Roman military. And Septimius Severus, the Roman emperor of north African origins, was buried here.

A scrutiny of parish records, kept by the Church of England until the 1830s, records many baptisms, marriages and burials of Africans. Sadly, as far as I know, the only research on these records in Kent is that carried out by a volunteer on the records kept at Canterbury Cathedral. He found hundreds of entries, dating from the 16th century.

A few years ago I asked the Canterbury Family History Society to attempt to follow up on some of these entries, but to this day they have not done so.

That indicates to me the enormous reluctance of people in Kent to admit that Britain has been 'multi-ethnic' for centuries and that that they might have had an African or Asian ancestor.

But many people must have, if for no other reason than that east Kent has many ports and up to 35 per cent of the crews of merchant vessels were from the colonies.

They were discharged when the ship docked, so some might well have settled in the ports. And, of course, from the 17th century it was very, very fashionable to have a black servant or two in your household, so how many of our great houses had such servants?

Marika Sherwood, Oare

MP's crossed line over tolls

SADLY, the Tory-led government intends to hike the tolls at the Dartford Crossing by an eye-watering 66 per cent. In a town where most people think the tolls should be scrapped altogether – not raised – it's hard to articulate the anger this has generated locally.

Dartford Labour Party is fully aware of that anger – we sympathise with it and have been working hard to represent those feelings. Indeed, we believe it is profoundly wrong in such difficult economic times to hit hard-pressed families and struggling businesses with such an inflation-busting toll increase.

So Labour activists have spent recent weeks collecting support for a petition to present to Dartford's Tory MP Gareth Johnson opposing the increase.

It wasn't difficult – local people welcomed the chance to signal their disapproval and we very quickly gathered getting on for 400 signatures.

We've also made our views clear to the Government directly that Labour vehemently opposes any form of toll increase.

What's really noticeable, however, is a sense amongst local people of having been let down. During 2010's general election campaign I vividly recall Mr Johnson saying he'd campaign for the tolls to be scrapped – he even repeated that undertaking in his maiden speech to the House of Commons.

People won't forget that and they certainly won't forgive it.

Labour councillor for Stone

Why are our cops in Kabul?

I WAS amazed when I saw your article about Kent police being sent to train police in Kabul.

What is this about?

For one, we don't have enough police of our own on the streets, but they can be sent away at our expense to have a virtual holiday.

And two, why Kent Police? They are without doubt the worst police force in Europe, they never do anything here so why send them anywhere unless its just to get rid of them.

Stewart May, Deal

Mixed schools spell trouble

A SHOP at the top of St John's Hill in Sevenoaks, currently under refurbishment, was for some time displaying a peculiar notice: "MAKE DELIVERY'S TO SIDE ENTERENCE".

This notice was the work of someone who clearly does not understand the difference between a genitive singular and a nominative plural; this is an increasingly common phenomenon nowadays, and I am sure that this is because the people concerned went to co-educational schools.

Certainly this particular error was noticeably less frequent in the days before mixed schools became so commonplace.

Having said that, though, one wonders what on earth is meant by an 'ENTERENCE', and I am wondering if possibly this is some kind of gadget that may perhaps be sold in one of the junk shops that have appeared at both ends of St John's Hill in recent times.

All will no doubt be revealed in due course.

John Humphrey, Sevenoaks

Emergency of A21 dualling

HOW irritating a condition requiring the dualling of the Tonbridge to Pembury section was not attached to the permission for the fantastic new shiny Pembury hospital.

Equally annoying is that these much-needed improvements have been thwarted by opponents to them, and the consequences of the previous government's reckless spending.

The Castle Hill stretch is regularly and severely congested, a wholly unacceptable position on a major strategic trunk road, a problem I am informed that has become more so since the full hospital opened a few weeks ago.

Worse still, this treacherous road has a significant accident record including, sadly, a track record of fatalities.

The campaign for dualling must continue. The A21 reference group of local MPs, local authority leaders and others meets again in mid-October. I will be there.

Nicolas Heslop, cabinet member for planning and transportation Tonbridge and Malling Borough Council

Remembering their sacrifice

ON Sunday, November 13, throughout the land there will be Remembrance Sunday wreath-laying ceremonies at which all those gathered will say "We will remember them".

The Royal British Legion Poppy Appeal leads up to that in asking that we all support the members of our Armed Forces who are injured and traumatised in many conflicts throughout the world, in the service of their country. The appeal is the primary source of funding for that support.

This year's appeal will focus on support for the Afghan generation of the Armed Forces family. May I ask your readers to be as supportive and generous as they have been in the past and that any (aged 16 or over) who may be able to spare an hour or two collecting call 0800 085 5924.

Overseas market opportunities on the table at Business Week Live

By Nick Ames

INTERNATIONAL trade is a proven route to business growth and now is a key time for Kent businesses to take advantage of opportunities that exist in overseas markets.

And the opportunities are set to come under the microscope at this year's Business Week Live event, which takes place on Wednesday, October 26, at the Dover Cruise Exhibition Centre.

Emerging areas for businesses to move into include Flanders in Belgium and parts of The Netherlands.

The EU-funded 2 Seas Trade project, led by Kent County Council, can provide free support to local firms in accessing opportunities in Europe.

Speaking at Business Week Live, Andrew Bowles, KCC's deputy cabinet member for localism and partnerships, will explain why the county council and its partner organisations are working together on the Kent International Business (KIB) initiative.

Under the programme, organisations across the county can provide support to enable the county's firms to take their products or services to new markets abroad as a way of boosting the local economy.

Another speaker, Yan Bechet, international commercial manager for HSBC Bank in Canterbury, deals with international business on a daily basis.

Bechet will present some of the evidence for why doing business overseas really does pay and why Kent businesses should consider looking beyond the domestic market as part of their growth strategy.

With a background in securing EU funding for Kent, Steve Samson, European policy and projects officer from KCC's international affairs group, will explain how Kent businesses can benefit from connections across the Channel.

According to analysts working on the 2 Seas project, businesses that trade internationally are more likely to:

- improve their productivity
- see growth not possible domestically

- tend to survive recessions better through spreading the risk of a downturn in a single market, thus increasing the resilience of their revenues and profits
- increase the commercial lifespan of their products and services

- increase the returns on their investment in research and development
- improve their financial performance
- expand the sales of existing products when the UK market is saturated
- become more innovative in new and existing products to compete internationally
- gain more buying power with existing and/or new suppliers through higher sales and achieve other economies of scale not possible domestically
- create better-quality jobs on average and provide more opportunities for staff development and retention

Among the areas identified by the project where Kent businesses could make inroads is West Flanders, in Belgium.

The province's capital, Bruges, has been a centre of trade since the early Middle Ages and now offers a range of business opportunities thanks to constant business innovation.

The two spearheads in the province's economy are the seaports of Zeebrugge

Olympian joins firm in celebrating 25 years

MPW Insurance Brokers Ltd celebrated a quarter of a century in business at a reception with its clients and guest speaker Olympian Steve Backley OBE.

The independent broker held a business lunch close to its offices at Turkey Mill's Orangery, in Maidstone, with 150 guests.

Company chairman Andy Webb said: "We were delighted to share our 25th anniversary with some of our most loyal and important clients and have been overwhelmed by the positive feedback we have received."

"Steve Backley's presentation was perfectly tailored to our business audience and provided a motivational insight into the preparation required to win Olympic medals, which proved to be of great interest with London 2012 on our doorstep."

MPW was set up by Steve McMurdo and Andy Webb, who saw a gap in the market for insurance brokers providing a personal but professional service, combined with a close knowledge of each client and their business.

Twenty-five years on and they are looking to the future, having just been awarded the Chartered Insurance Brokers title following their recent rebrand and website launch.

CHARITY

Funeral director rewarded for his hard work with vice-president role

STEPHEN Tester, from funeral directors Tester & Jones in Crowborough, has been appointed vice-president of The Rotary Club of the town.

Tester, who runs the company with Glenys Jones, has been a member of Rotary in the town for a number of years and has held various roles in the past including community service and fund-raising chairman.

"As a firm we are very much part of the local community and being a member of Rotary is an extension of that," he said.

"Rotary is a great group of people and we do a variety of activities to benefit the people of Crowborough and the surrounding area."

Throughout the year, The Rotary Club of Crowborough supports many events including the Crowborough Hospital Fete and the Crowborough Carnival, as well as individuals. It has an annual Christmas appeal which last year raised £3,590.

Recently it donated money to the Groombridge-based Paralympian Will Bayley. He has recently secured a place in the GB team for the London 2012 Paralympics and, as the world table-tennis number two, is a gold-medal prospect.

Bayley was born with a rare congenital disorder that affects the use of his limbs. When he was diagnosed with cancer at the age of eight, his grandmother bought him a table-tennis table to help him through his recovery. He started to play competitively aged 12.

FOOD AND DRINK

Produced in Kent keen to get message across

THE produce of the Garden of England will be highlighted in an address at this year's Business Week Live event on Wednesday, October 26.

Julie Monkman, manager of Produced in Kent, will be talking about the high standard of food and drink which comes from the county and its importance to the local economy.

She said: "The importance of the food and drink sector in Kent cannot be underestimated."

"Kent has been known as the Garden of England for centuries and this wonderful brand has been updated and revitalised by Visit Kent's Kent Contemporary campaign with great success over the last 18 months."

"The food-and-drink sector in Kent is making a fantastic contribution to Kent's economy. Since joining Produced in Kent just over three years ago, I have been lucky enough to work with many food and drink businesses that we have helped to develop and grow."

"Food and drink is one of the main reasons visitors come to Kent and it's our job to make sure they know where to go. It's also our role to encourage Kent people to buy their food and drink locally, from Kent businesses. Our message here is 'Support Kent and buy local!'"

So just what is credit easing?

By Nick Falcon

editorial@archant.co.uk

IT'S a term that is new to most of us – while there can't be many who can genuinely claim to know precisely what Chancellor George Osborne was proposing earlier this month when he announced that his Government would be adopting a policy of 'credit easing' in a bid to steer the country away from a double-dip recession.

The policy is intended to "inject money directly into the parts of the economy that need it, such as small businesses", according to Osborne.

In essence, it appears to be a more targeted version of quantitative easing, the process started in 2009 by which the Bank of England credited its own account with money it had credited ex nihilo (out of nothing).

It then used this money to buy financial assets such as government and corporate bonds from banks and other financial institutions.

Those purchases were intended to give the institutions the reserves necessary to allow them to create new money by lending more. In theory, the increased money supply would stimulate the economy. It is a moot point as to whether it worked. A Bank of England report said the policy had provided "significant" benefit to growth and helped GDP rise by up to 2 per cent, but others say it is not possible to credit that growth to quantitative easing.

And now it, or something similar in the form of credit easing, is back. So is there any difference between the two concepts, or are they simply differing forms of jargon for the same principle?

It depends how Osborne structures his policy, but the main difference is that this time round the Government will buy bonds issued by companies (corporate bonds) rather than government bonds.

Such bonds tend to be issued by larger companies, but if SMEs – the intended beneficiaries – are to gain from credit easing, small-company loans and overdrafts could, for example, be repackaged as 'securitisations', which would then be bought by the Government (through the Bank of England or, perhaps, a specially-created vehicle).

Another important difference of the new policy is that it circumnavigates the involvement of the banks.

The whole process – or potential process – is too complex to detail in its entirety here, but how might we expect it to work?

Phil Beavan, of High Growth Kent, who will be speaking at this month's Business Week Live, said: "The answer is that we don't exactly know – details will not be revealed until the Autumn Statement on November 29, and at present no one knows when it will be implemented – but it's a pretty safe bet that we are a few months off.

"What is obvious is that headlines regarding the Government 'taking banks out of the loop and lending directly to small businesses' are, perhaps, a little over-zealous.

"From what we have been able to glean thus far, the policy will involve the Government borrowing money to purchase bonds from companies and, yes, the Treasury is actually talking about developing a corporate-bond market for small and medium-sized businesses.

"If that is the reality, then what we think of as SMEs will not be able to participate. The issuing of these bonds may well need to be assessed by the rating agencies and issuing of such securities will, by necessity, involve corporate finance advisers and associated fees.

"Perhaps in recognition of this, the Government has suggested that it may also purchase books of loan assets advanced by banks to smaller businesses; in other words, allowing the banks to advance loans that they would not ordinarily allow which they can then package up and sell to the Government.

"The theory is that the risk of these loans would then sit with the Government, not the bank.

"The concern is that if the banks can pass the risk on to the Government, then they may not be as diligent in assessing credit risk as perhaps they could be... which is kind of what got us into this trouble in the first place.

"It is, however, something of an admission that the current structure for lending to SMEs is not working – something that most SMEs are only too well aware of, just not something that our political masters seem hugely keen to admit.

"So in short, it is a matter of watch this space: the scheme is not available yet and the details of when it will be available and what it will look like are almost two months off."

Raising a glass to increased turnover

BREWER Shepherd Neame has announced its turnover was up 5.2 per cent to £121.3 million in the 12 months to June 25 when compared with the previous year's figure.

Share values were also up and beer sales increased by 4 per cent against a UK-wide decline of 7.1 per cent.

Brands performing particularly well include Spitfire, Bishops Finger and Asahi Super Dry.

Figures for recent months are also encouraging, with beer volume up 6.9 per cent from June until mid-September.

Chairman Miles Templeman said the Faversham company enjoyed a particularly strong second half of the year.

He said: "This is another strong performance from Shepherd Neame as we have achieved record turnover and record beer volume. We have improved the offer in our pubs, enjoyed the benefits of recent capital investment in our estate, grown our beer sales and invested to develop our marketing capability.

"However, the general economic and industry outlook remains challenging, with decline in consumer income and inflation in our cost base.

"We will continue to pursue our long-term strategy of investing fully in our brands and pubs so as to retain the strength and identity of the business. I have every confidence that we will continue to deliver value for shareholders with dividend growth and a strong balance sheet for future expansion."

DRINK TO THE FUTURE: Jonathan Neame

Unusual factors affecting sales included a decline due to the cold winter, but a boost came due to the royal wedding in April.

Chief executive Jonathan Neame said: "This has been a good year in a very challenging consumer climate. Our beer volume, food and accommodation sales have outperformed the market and our brand and pub portfolios have become stronger. We are confident that investment in building our marketing team will deliver more effective consumer engagement in the future.

"Our strategy is clear, consistent and focused on delivering long-term sustainable growth. Our balance sheet is strong, underlined by the recent pub-estate revaluation. Our cash flow from operating activities is sufficient both to pay down debt and be able to acquire new assets in the same year.

"We employ people and enjoy partnerships with licensees, suppliers and customers who are highly committed to the success of Shepherd Neame. This support enables the company to perform at very high levels, as evidenced by the number of outstanding awards won this year.

"However, the general economic and industry outlook remains challenging as we face the twin issues of decline in consumer incomes and inflation in our cost base. But, despite these adverse trends, we believe we are pursuing a strategy that will make our beer and pub business a stronger performer for the future."

The seaports are supported by an extensive network of inland waterways, roads and railways. In addition, the region boasts two international airports.

The economic success of West Flanders is the result of a wide portfolio of activities and expertise, as well as its open economy. These range from industry, technology and leading industrial design to agriculture, frozen vegetables and fishing, as well as renewable energy, machine manufacturing and textiles.

The high education level and the work ethic of the well-trained, multilingual and productive employees in West Flanders, as well as the favourable SME entrepreneurial climate, are also highly appreciated by both local and foreign companies, say experts.

Meanwhile, East Flanders is one of the world's leading regions for life sciences.

Apart from biotechnology, East Flanders also profiles itself in sectors like information and communication technology, multimedia, semiconductors, medical software and environmental technology.

Because of its strategic situation, the south-west of The Netherlands has been among the most popular regions for business investments.

Companies with international markets, logistics, trade and manufacturing process benefit from the convenient situation close to connections.

Government launches credit easing scheme for local businesses

- Are there any precedents?
- Is it any different to quantitative easing?
- Why is it being introduced?
- When will it happen?

BUSINESSES across the county have broadly welcomed news of a multi-billion pound programme designed to avoid a new credit crunch, announced by Chancellor George Osborne.

The new mechanism of "credit easing" was unveiled at the Conservative Party conference amidst worries that bank lending could seize up again in the wake of fears over the Eurozone.

Mr Osborne has put forward previously untried means to attempt to get the economy moving.

Credit easing could see tens of billions of pounds made available to small and medium enterprises as they would be able to bypass the banks when it comes to loans.

Andrew Alves, development manager of the Kent and Medway Federation of Small Businesses said: "The credit easing measure could be a significant development that would open up a new finance stream to viable businesses."

"The FSB hope this scheme will be run through an arms-length organisation that has the procedures and processes already set up, such as UKFI (UK Financial Investments Ltd, a Government economic management body), so that it can be implemented as soon as possible.

"With 30 per cent of businesses believing they missed their growth opportunity in the last year as a result of not getting finance from their bank, we look forward to working with government to ensure that it can benefit the very smallest of businesses that want to invest and grow."

The funding for credit easing will come from the Treasury, but details on how the scheme will operate are still at an early stage. It is most likely it would see small business loans being packaged together and guaranteed by the Government.

These packaged securities could then be sold in the bond markets – similar to the corporate bond structure in place in the USA.

Experts believe the Bank of England will be tasked with running the programme - which is in essence a way for the Treasury to inject credit more directly into small businesses, without relying on the banks.

By circumventing the banks, it's hoped that the rates of interest charged on loans will fall significantly, and better reflect the current rock-bottom Bank of England base rate.

Mr Alves also added a note of caution to his optimism.

"The Chancellor announced some welcome measures to help small businesses," he said.

"However, it is difficult to regard the Conservative Party as the party of small businesses only two days after it introduced a raft of new and costly employment regulations which will hinder small firms growth plans and burden them with yet more red tape.

"The FSB also welcome steps to help inject money into small firms, but need to see more detail so look forward to working with the Government on this."

Legal eagles aim high with recruits

REGIONAL law firm Cripps Harries Hall has recruited eight trainee solicitors for its Tunbridge Wells office.

Five of the new recruits come from Kent or Sussex, which the company says demonstrates its commitment to developing local talent.

They will now embark upon a two-year programme which will see them gain experience in a wide range of legal disciplines before qualifying as solicitors.

Cripps has also announced the retention of six newly-qualified solicitors on completion of their training contracts with the firm.

Director of human resources and development, Alan Geaney, said: "During these challenging times, we have pursued a policy of retaining our talented people whenever possible.

"We are delighted to have placed six newly qualified solicitors and welcomed an additional eight trainee solicitors to the firm. We see our trainees as an investment for the future and our training programme is geared to give them the experience they need to reach the top."

Aspiring landlords invited to brewery

FAVERSHAM-based brewer Shepherd Neame is offering aspiring entrepreneurs with a flair for hospitality the chance to run their own pub.

The company is holding an open day on Monday, October 24, where potential licensees can talk to experts about the advantages of a career as their own boss behind the bar.

Tenanted operations manager Greg Wallis said: "Becoming a pub tenant with Shepherd Neame can be a low-cost, low-risk way to launch a business. Shepherd Neame tenants benefit from a complete training package and extensive business and technical support.

"Each is his or her own boss with the power and confidence to make decisions, while enjoying the advice and backing of a partner with more than 300 years' experience."

Shepherd Neame, which is located at 17 Court Street, Faversham, is Britain's oldest brewer and is responsible for such ales as Spitfire, Bishop's Finger, 1698, Master Brew and Canterbury Jack. It operates an estate of more than 350 pubs, inns and hotels in the South East.

Apprentice of year crowned by gas firm

By Steve Knight

steve.knight@archant.co.uk

BRITISH Gas is doing its bit for the economy by training an average of 130 engineers a year from the firm's Energy Academy in Dartford.

Opened in 2006 by then-Education Secretary Alan Johnson, the centre supports the recruitment, induction and training of apprentices and trainees who work throughout London and the South East.

And last week the firm, which invests £25 million per year into the development and training of its staff, crowned the academy's Stacey Tear as its apprentice of the year.

The 27-year-old received the accolade from Dartford Tory MP Gareth Johnson due to her hard work and professional approach during her 18-month apprenticeship. She was also part of a team of engineers who helped build classrooms at a school for underprivileged children in India.

Mr Johnson said: "It was a privilege to meet Stacey and it makes me very proud of what is being done here in the Dartford constituency.

"The training and skills I saw in the academy are the things that will see the private sector help our economy grow.

"I am particularly impressed by the training in new technologies such as smart meters, which will help put customers in control of their energy bills and save energy and money. It is clear Dartford will be at the heart of this revolution."

Last year more than 200 apprentices were trained at the Energy Academy, which has five sister sites in Leicester, Hamilton, Leeds, Thatcham, and Tredegar.

It measures 30,000 square feet and is large enough to accommodate 130 apprentices at any one time.

Academy manager John Timoney said: "The range of training we provide here builds on our reputation as a centre of excellence for training British Gas engineers.

"Stacey has worked hard to be the apprentice of the year and is an excellent role model. I congratulate her on this great achievement, which is a testament to her high standard of work and positive attitude during her apprenticeship.

"She is a fantastic asset to British Gas."

Meanwhile, four former trainees at Dungeness B nuclear power station on the Romney Marsh have successfully completed their four-year apprenticeship programmes.

Tom Quartermain, Stephen Smith, Thomas Bartrum and Matthew Hall made the trip to the International Motorcycle Museum in Coventry to pick up their graduation certificates alongside 39 colleagues from EDF Energy's seven other power plants.

Dr Andy Spurr, managing director of nuclear generation business at the firm, said: "I know how much work these guys have put in over the last four years to get to where they are today, so I was determined that we should properly mark their accomplishments with our own graduation ceremony. They should be very proud of what they have achieved thus far."

Survival expert earns management qualification through Navy course

A ROYAL Navy aviation survival equipment expert from Birchington has passed a top management qualification.

Chief Petty Officer Si Lanson, 41, a veteran of the helicopter search and rescue unit at HMS Gannet in Scotland, has been studying for a Level 7 certificate in executive management from the Institute of Leadership and Management.

The former St Anselm's School, Canterbury, student currently lives with his wife and two children in Gosport, Hampshire, but says he still finds the time to return to Kent whenever possible.

"The ILP Level 7 was particularly intense and the basis of the course was a consolidation of all the training I have done in the Navy, in leadership and management," he said.

"The course itself, although intense, allowed me to look at not only my present position in the Navy but all previous jobs I had done with regards to the development of a manager.

"It was amazing to see how much of my experience could be applied within the course. I'm pleased and proud that I've managed to complete it and gain this qualification."

CPO Lanson currently works on the flight survival equipment desk at the Royal Navy's command headquarters in Portsmouth.

He is due to leave the service next year and hopes to land a job in the offshore industry.

Neets back in class thanks to taster day

YOUNG people not in employment, education or training (Neets) were tempted back into the classroom for a taster day at Canterbury College's Sheppey campus.

The visitors were given the opportunity to attend short sessions in hairdressing, woodwork, brickwork, business and IT, with all those in attendance signing up to a course by the end of the day.

The college worked with the careers advice service Connexions to contact all of Swale's registered Neets – a term devised by the Government for jobless 16-24-year-olds – to let them know about the opportunity.

Director of student support services Lut Stewart said: "Canterbury College has a clear focus of getting young people back into education and training.

"The college also works very closely with education and career advice service Connexions in attempting to engage young people. We offer regular drop-in sessions, provide individual appointments and hold special events throughout the year.

"It has been proven by the British Birth Cohort Study that 16-to-18-year-olds out of education, employment or training are more likely to suffer depression, social deprivation and poor physical health by the age of 21."

Students from the Canterbury College Support Crew were on hand to answer the Neets' questions about college life, and those who attended said they were impressed by the range of courses on offer. Luke Shoebridge, 16, who took part in the 'Pathway to the Trades' taster session, said: "It helped me decide to stay in education.

WILLING: Two youngsters at the taster day

"I wasn't going to come in but I did, and now I'm going to do the course."

Luke Armstrong, 16, who attended the same session, added: "I was doing something similar in school and coming here made me want to do it again."

The taster day was part-funded by the European Social Fund's Have a Go campaign, which aims to provide one million opportunities for people across the UK.

Financial incentive for youngsters as student rewarded for hard work

A MIDKENT College student scooped a £600 prize for the best overall performance in the Construction and the Built Environment (CBE) Advanced Diploma Level 3.

Alex Tindall received the cash at an awards ceremony hosted by the Chartered Institute of Building (CIOB), which hopes the financial incentive will encourage other young people to take up a trade.

Janette Welton-Pai, sector strategies manager for careers at CITB-ConstructionSkills, said: "It is very encouraging to see winners like Alex do so well in this diploma.

"We have worked closely with employers, local authorities, schools and colleges in order to develop this qualification. Students gain both practical and academic knowledge, helping to ensure the industry has the high calibre of new recruits it needs."

The CBE Diploma combines classroom learning with practical experience and aims to give students an insight into the world of work.

Students are invited to visit live sites and get involved in the planning and building of projects. This offers them the opportunity of mentoring by professionals working in their chosen field.

CIOB examinations manager Sue Dennison said: "We were very impressed with the extremely high standard of the short-listed candidates."

(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

Notice is hereby given that owing to the likelihood of danger to the public whilst works are carried out on or near the highway the Kent County Council has made an Order restricting the use by vehicular traffic on St Julians Road, Seal from Park Lane for approx 55metres West.

The Order will become effective on 17th October 2011, will be in operation and remain valid for a maximum period of 18 months; the works are planned to last 4 weeks. These restrictions will be effective when the appropriate signage is in place.

The alternative route for the above restriction will be via Fawke Wood Road, Carters Hill.

The purpose of the closure is to facilitate installation of a new water pipe.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council, in exercise of its powers proposes to make an Order under Sections 81 to 84 of and part IV of Schedule 9 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, the effect of which will introduce a 40mph speed limit on the un-named road, which is the new section of the B2005 Sittingbourne Northern Relief Road (herein after referred to as SNRR) and;

UNDER Sections 65 and 66 (1) of the Highways Act 1980 and all other enabling powers, intends to install an Un-Segregated Shared Pedestrian / Cycle Track on the SNRR.

As part of Kent County Council's regeneration programme, Phase 3 of the Sittingbourne Northern Relief Road (SNRR) is due to be open by the end of November 2011.

The SNRR is a 1.4 km length of single carriageway road in the north east of Sittingbourne, with bridges over Milton Creek and the Sittingbourne and Kemsley Light Railway. The new length will form a link between the two existing sections of the relief road which are between Grovehurst interchange on the A249 and Ridham Avenue, and between Castle Road and the East Hall Farm residential development.

Jacobs Engineering UK Ltd has been commissioned to work in partnership with the Kent County Council to progress the legal procedures necessary to implement the proposed measures.

Copies of the plan showing the extent of the proposals can be inspected during normal working hours at The Kent County Council Offices, Sessions House, County Road, Maidstone Kent, ME14 1XQ and at Swale Borough Council Offices, Swale House, East Street, Sittingbourne, Kent ME10 3HT.

Anyone wishing to support these proposals, or object to them, should write to Diane Bourne, Jacobs Engineering UK Ltd, Miller House, Lower Stone Street, Maidstone, Kent, ME15 6GB, quoting the name of the Order and reference No "B1405600" and stating their reasons, by no later than Monday 7th November 2011. Responses received after this date will not be included.

(40 MPH SPEED LIMIT) ORDER 2011

(CULLET DRIVE & RUSHENDEN ROAD, QUEENBOROUGH)
(WAITING RESTRICTIONS) ORDER 2011
ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984

Due to a change in the scheme design it is necessary to re-advertise the notice for the above scheme and consequently carry out a consultation process for the new proposals.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council, in exercise of its powers proposes to make an Order under Sections 81, 82, 83 and 84 of and part IV of Schedule 9 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, the effect of which will introduce a 40mph speed limit on a section of the Rushenden Relief Road called Thomsett Way (B2007) and;

Under Sections 1, 2 and 124 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 as amended by Schedule 8 of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 and part 6 of the Traffic Management Act 2004, the effect of which will amend the existing "At Any Time" Waiting Restrictions in Cullet Drive and Rushenden Road at the locations where they meet Thomsett Way (B2007).

The Kent County Council is working in partnership with the South East England Development Agency, known as SEEDA to promote further development and regeneration at Rushenden and Queenborough on the Isle of Sheppey.

Thomsett Way is currently known as the Rushenden Relief Road and will become the B2007 part of which will be subject to a 40mph speed limit from its north eastern roundabout junction with the A249 Breille Way south westwards, to a point 40 metres east of the mid point of its roundabout junction with Cullet Drive. The remaining length will automatically be a 30 mph speed limit by virtue of street lighting. The current B2007, which is called Main Road, will be de-classified.

There is also a need to alter small lengths of the existing "At Any Time" Waiting Restrictions in Cullet Drive and Rushenden Road at the locations where they meet Thomsett Way.

The proposals involve substantial mixed commercial and housing development, to provide new employment and homes as well as complement the existing development.

Access to the existing development through Queenborough is poor and a new link road called Thomsett Way, Queenborough, between the A249 and the existing and new development areas is proposed. SEEDA has secured Homes and Community Agency and other government and private sector funding.

The link road will be a new carriageway, part dual carriageway and part single carriageway. It will run between the new roundabout at Neats Court, constructed as part of the A249 Swale Crossing scheme, and pass over the railway connecting to a new junction on Rushenden Road. An intermediate roundabout will serve Cullet Drive.

Copies of the plan showing the extent of the proposals can be inspected during normal working hours at The Kent County Council Offices, Sessions House, County Road, Maidstone Kent, ME14 1XQ and at Swale Borough Council Offices, Swale House, East Street, Sittingbourne ME10 3HT.

Anyone wishing to support these proposals, or object to them, should write to Diane Bourne, Jacobs Engineering UK Ltd, Miller House, Lower Stone Street, Maidstone, Kent, ME15 6GB, quoting the name of the Order and reference No "B1272600" and stating their reasons, by no later than Monday 7th November 2011. Responses received after this date will not be included.

The wisdom of Sister Shocked

Ed Hill talks to the political activist and 80s musical icon ahead of her tour

MICHELLE Shocked has been an icon of the independent music scene since the 80s. The Texan singer-songwriter's first success came in the UK after a tape of her singing around a festival campfire was released.

She said: "At the time I was not pursuing a career in music at all. I was a squatter and activist, engaged in grass-roots politics. I had not even made a demo."

English producer Pete Lawrence had recorded the tapes on his Walkman in America and released them as The Texas Campfire Tapes. He brought Shocked to the UK to promote the album. It was a strange time for the young star catapulted into the limelight.

"I was on the famous episode of The Tube when Jools Holland used the F word," said Shocked. "I had that brush with fame that you can have the first time round. I was on the cover of the NME, so I was sort of junior famous."

However, Shocked's success came at a time when she was disputing the release of the album.

She said: "They proceeded to do a deal with a major label in the US, claiming that they had contractual rights for the tapes which they had not obtained from me. It led to a lot of legal wrangles, but in the meantime the album went to the top of the UK independent charts."

"By then my own US album had become successful, so I had a second round of fame when that happened."

"It was a time when people run to get your autograph or queue around the block to get into your show. I was big in England, but you do have to have a sense of perspective. I wasn't exactly King of the World."

Throughout her career, Shocked has been regarded as fiercely independent, having had a series of battles with record companies.

She said: "I drew on my political values to deal with this cycle of fame. To the music establishment, that does seem fierce independence, but it was no more so than a group of workers coming together to strike."

"I am very strong-willed. When they say 'fiercely independent', what they mean is 'she can't be bought for any sum of money'."

Shocked has gone through a number of musical styles. She has released albums featuring blues, punk, gospel, folk, swing and bluegrass. The variety has led to accusations of fans not knowing what to expect next.

"My view is that the music was already contained within me. It was just a question of which facet I wanted to reveal at the time. My songs come straight from the roots of American music."

You might think an artist who set up her own label would welcome the internet, which can give musicians more control over their work, but Shocked has her reservations.

She said: "With self-publishing sites like YouTube, it really is a case of the lunatics running the asylum. People now bootleg artists for free and they don't have the slightest idea why a bootleg is theft. I have had to educate my audience about paying for music."

"There is only one bootleg video of me on YouTube. I allow it because it is from a political rally earlier this year where people in Madison, Wisconsin, were protesting against an unfair labour law being introduced by the Governor."

"Most of the stuff you will see of me on YouTube is the quality production videos that I have control over."

The singer is involved in her own project, called Roadworks, to get her music to fans.

She said: "It's my effort to try to pioneer a new style of touring that is almost like subscription for fans."

"The conventional way is that you go in the studio, make an album and then go on the road to promote it. Roadworks shows you don't need a massive big hit to maintain that dialogue with fans. There is an audience that wants to follow you – they just need to hear when you are coming to town. That is where social-networking has become a game-changer. I no longer need radio or TV to promote me."

Shocked is coming to the UK in the 25th anniversary year of the Camp Fire tapes being released. She will be playing at the East Quay in Whitstable later this month.

She said: "The success of the first album was something I wasn't able to deal with at the time. I now have 25 years of wisdom and perspective to draw on."

"I love UK audiences. They are very cynical but sort of innocent at the same time. I always say you get the audience you deserve."

What about the speculation over her stage name? Is it a reference to Electroconvulsive Therapy?

She said: "I was arrested at a demonstration in 1984 in San Francisco. When you're arrested, you have to provide a name. Because it was a political rally, I gave my protest name, which was Michelle Shocked – shocked by the Cold War policies of the Reagan administration."

"There is this weird insistence that I do not know the genesis of my name. Later I adopted it as a stage name to sell records."

"It's the sort of name you give yourself as a 20-year-old going around with a Mohawk, but now I'm a 50-year-old with the same name. That shows real commitment. I must be a true believer because even the people in church call me Sister Shocked when I get up and sing."

■ Michelle Shocked is at the East Quay, Whitstable, on Saturday, October 22. Visit <http://whitlive.co.uk> for tickets.

Preparation best way to stay healthy

AUTUMN is now well and truly here and it is this time of year when pharmacists and GPs are beginning to see patients who have coughs and colds and are generally feeling low.

But a little forward-planning can boost the body's defences and give you a fighting chance of staying fit. An autumn health check-up is one way of making sure you have the best possible chance of staying fit throughout the darker days.

If you're starting to feel tired or have little symptoms — sniffles, cold sores, mouth ulcers or a prickly throat — it can be an indicator that your body is not in tip-top shape. Also, if your defences aren't strong then you won't be able to fight off those bugs when they start spreading.

And just because the weather's not so good, experts say don't stay indoors. A healthy jog through the fallen leaves is good for fitness levels as well as being an enjoyable experience.

Natural remedies such as echinacea can also help to keep you fit. The substance has been proven to increase the number of white blood cells, but don't over-use it.

Experts recommend perhaps two weeks on, two weeks off, so your body doesn't get adjusted to it or over-stimulated.

Some people believe vitamin C and zinc tablets can help ward off problems of the ear, nose and throat.

Zinc is vital for supporting your immune system and good for wound-healing, while Manuka honey is believed to have anti-bacterial, anti-fungal and anti-viral properties.

Experts say if you have a problem, tackle it. So make sure you go to the doctor and get some advice.

The worst thing you can do is stagger on regardless — possibly passing your germs on to work colleagues, friends and family so they suffer, too.

Meatballs proved the answer to my last-minute dining dilemma

LOOKING for somewhere to eat in Maidstone at 7pm on a Friday night is no easy task.

After being turned away from a number of restaurants, my housemate and I had no problem agreeing to a half-hour wait when the already-busy Wildwood said they'd find us a table.

A bit of a Tardis inside, the restaurant is spacious and modern while also managing to retain a level of intimacy. Being able to pack in the diners certainly worked in our favour as 15 minutes later we were seated and sipping our drinks and nibbling on some olives (£2.75) while we chose our starters.

I opted for the meatballs (£5.50), smothered in tomato sauce and topped off with melted cheese, which set a very high bar for the rest of the meal.

My housemate chose the baked portobello mushrooms (£5.25). The gorgonzola cheese was a little strong, but the dish was very tasty, and we both enjoyed mopping up the sauce with our side of mozzarella garlic bread with caramelised onion (£4.85).

For our mains we had smoked haddock risotto (£10.25) and baked spicy cod in tomato sauce (£11.95). The risotto was a beautifully colourful dish that was tasty (with just the right balance of haddock and other flavours), but it was such a large portion that my housemate struggled to polish it off.

My cod was apparently our waiter's favourite dish, and it was indeed very tasty; however, the tomato sauce was essentially the same that I'd had on my meatballs, but with a large kick of spice thrown in. It was good, but because the meatballs had been so spot-on, it didn't really compare and I found myself constantly diving into our sides of green beans (£2.85) and mixed salad (£3.50) as a cool counterbalance.

Despite feeling stuffed, we were unable to say no when offered the dessert menu, ordering white chocolate cheesecake (£4.75) and sorbet cones (£4.25).

The cheesecake was every bit as delightful as you'd expect. I would generally go for something a little more imaginative than sorbet but felt I had to order this to find out how they could justify charging such a high price.

Two – small – scoops of sorbet (one lemon, one mango) were served in individual cones, balanced in champagne glasses stood on a large wooden platter, so I can only guess the price was directed at the presentation rather than the substance.

Washed down with a couple of glasses of wine and a refreshing fresh-mint lemonade, and finished off with coffee, we had a pleasant evening of some very good food, but next time round I would just have the meatballs as a main course, and probably a starter, too – they were that good.

Our final bill came to £69.80.

For those who enjoy watching wildlife, the RSPB nature reserve at Dungeness offers the opportunity to take in nature at its finest

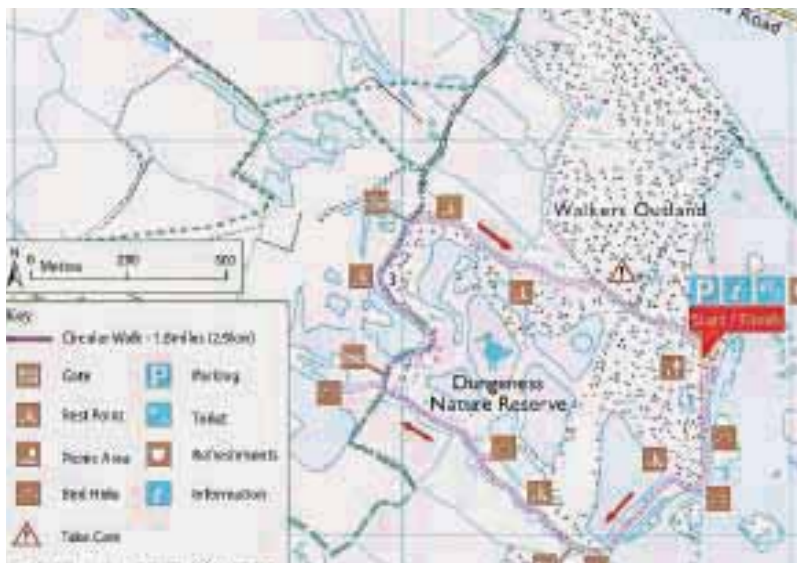

TAKE a walk in a wildlife-watcher's paradise at Dungeness RSPB nature reserve and learn more about this very wild and atmospheric area of Kent.

If you haven't been to Dungeness before, nothing can quite prepare you for the amazing landscape – one of the largest expanses of shingle in the world.

The birdwatching opportunities are second to none and the wildlife and plantlife in the area is rich and varied. Whether you are a knowledgeable watcher or just getting started, there is always something to see.

For the novice, most hides contain helpful charts to help you identify the birds you may spot. Often a scarce grebe or diver can be seen on site during the winter and it is one of the best places in the UK to see the beautiful smew.

This short walk leads you around a series of hides where there is an excellent chance of seeing bitterns and bearded tits in winter.

There is plenty to be seen at other times, too. Dungeness's position, jutting into the English Channel, makes it ideally placed to watch for migrant birds, with wheatears, swallows, martins and warblers regularly seen.

The RSPB reserve, where last year purple herons bred successfully in the UK for the first time, welcomes families – there is a range of activities throughout the year. It's a great place for children to become 'wildlife detectives' and enjoy learning about nature.

Nearby is Dungeness village, which seems more like a scattered collection of dwellings than a typical village; small wooden houses in the main, many built around old railway coaches.

The most famous house is Prospect Cottage, formerly owned by the late artist and film-director Derek Jarman. The cottage itself is

The garden, however, is the main attraction. Reflecting the bleak, windswept landscape of the peninsula, it is made of pebbles, driftwood, scrap metal and a few hardy plants.

If you have some time after your walk, the nearby Denge sound mirrors make for a fascinating visit. Built between 1928 and 1930, the three massive concrete structures formed an experimental early-warning system that aimed to detect invading aircraft by focusing sound waves.

Their different forms are evidence of their experimental nature; they were not particularly effective and were abandoned when radar became available.

Fantastic food and drink with no cab needed

TOP-CLASS hotels are not just about the bedroom, bar and spa facilities any more. Instead, customers who travel from far and wide to visit Kent need to be assured of a top-quality meal, too.

Walking along the downs or skimming stones across the water is a surefire way to work up an appetite and a good hotel restaurant with an excellent menu can be the most convenient and pleasurable way to satisfy hungry guests.

Hotel restaurants are no longer reserved strictly for the people staying within the building as daytrippers and food connoisseurs look to put these eateries to the test.

Trying out new restaurants is more than a pleasant way to spend a Friday evening, with more and more people taking up the serious hobby of dining out weekly to try new venues and fresh dishes. This is action of which hotels are determined to be part.

There is a growing number of hotel dining rooms associating themselves with top chefs or culinary celebrities as they look to attract custom from the street as well as the bedrooms upstairs.

The advantages of having a decent chef and superb menu within a hotel are there for all to see.

With a hotel eatery, there is no need for diners to worry about paying for a taxi home or having to limit the amount of wine they drink with their glorious meal.

They can stay and make a night of it, finishing at their own leisure before wandering upstairs to a comfortable bed. Here are six of the best hotel restaurants from around the county. Enjoy!

A NATIONAL touring exhibition, including work from graffiti artist Banksy, will be heading to the No 1 Smithery at The Historic Dockyard in Chatham.

The show explores the controversial ways that street art has moved away from the painted wall into printmaking and other media.

It showcases established and emerging street artists, both British and international, including names such as Banksy, D*Face, Jamie Hewlett, Eine, Miss Tic, Shepard Fairey and Swoon.

Items include paintings, screen prints, linocuts, stencil prints, stickers and folded books.

Although street artists now produce work for galleries, most still work outside systems.

BLENDING stand-up comedy, mime, vaudeville and puppetry, The Boy With Tape On His Face was the runaway hit of last year's Edinburgh Fringe, scooping five-star reviews and an Edinburgh Comedy Award nomination for best newcomer. Now there's another chance to catch this award-winning show as it embarks on an international tour, taking in the UK, Ireland, Europe and South Africa. Created by New Zealand stand-up Sam Wills, the show appeals to the child in all of us. Wills has created a charming character who opens up a world of singing shoes, mischievous dustbins, audience participation and the heart-warming power of gaffer-tape.

ENJOY live music, ghost stories and traditional mulled beer at Shepherd Neame's award-winning visitor centre. Ale fans will need to keep their wits about them at Halloween as ghostly figures tell tales of unusual sightings at the brewery.

Ghost tours take place on Saturday and Sunday, October 29-30, with the chance to warm up afterwards with a pint of Shepherd Neame's new Spooks Ale.

There is also a specially-themed Halloween Beer and Food Evening on October 29 in the brewery's 15th-century function room.

The Winter Beer and Food Evening on Friday, November 4, will have four seasonal courses matched with ales and lagers. The event includes a guided tour and tutored beer tasting.

THE second of the Deal Festival autumn series takes place next week as brilliant Latvian pianist Olga Jegunova returns for what is sure to be another top concert.

Having graduated from the Royal College of Music as a student of the great Russian pianist Professor Dmitri Alexeev, Jegunova has won numerous international piano competitions and performed at many of the world's festivals. Her 2011 solo performances included working with the Sinfonia Concertante, Lithuanian Chamber Orchestra and Manchester Camerata. Jegunova will perform a wonderful selection of music, including the traditional Scarlatti's Sonata in D minor. Tickets are on sale now.

Guys & Dolls Gamble on a true classic

Orchard Theatre, Dartford
Wed to Sat, October 19-22
01322 220000
www.orchardtheatre.co.uk

BROADWAY comes to north Kent through the classic musical Guys & Dolls as Dartford Amateur Operatic And Dramatic Society takes to the stage once more. Having successfully put on The Wizard Of Oz, My Fair Lady and, most recently, Calamity Jane, the group is now attempting the West End hit. The show tells the story of a group of small-time gamblers and the ladies in their lives. Nathan Detroit bets his pal Sky Masterson that he can make the next lady he sees fall in love with him. When the next lady happens to be neighbourhood missionary Sarah Brown, the stage is set for an evening of high-spirited entertainment. Toe-tapping songs like Luck Be A Lady and the title song Guys And Dolls, should make for a great night out.

Terrible tales After dark in the graveyard

The Canterbury Tales
Thu to Mon, October 27-31
01227 784600
www.canterburytales.org.uk

THE Canterbury Tales is turning terrible this Halloween for a one-off series of after-dark performances of Chaucer's classic tales. This is the first time that the group will take the performances outside to the graveyard of the former church, which is now home to the award-winning visitor attraction. Visitors will be treated to a horrifying rendition of Sir Naughtly Knight's quest to right a wrong, join Noctine and Nigel in The Pardoner's Tale and be terrified by the Haunting of the Willful Boy. For a scarily good end to the evening, the audience will be guided through the attraction's diseased, derelict streets of medieval England.

Acoustic Triangle Top trio come onboard

The Ship Theatre, Sevenoaks
Sunday, October 23, at 8pm
01732 740889
www.listeningroom.co.uk

MALCOLM Creese, Tim Garland and Gwilym Simcock, collectively known as Acoustic Triangle, are embarking on a short UK tour. The trio have become recognised in both classical and popular genres with a loyal fan base, having toured and recorded music for the last 10 years. They are bringing their extraordinary, unamplified music to The Ship Theatre in Hollybush Lane, Sevenoaks, on Sunday, October 23. With Tim Garland's busy schedule that includes playing in Chick Corea's band, and the equally busy schedule of Mercury Prize nominee Gwilym Simcock, this is a rare special event to come to Kent. Tickets cost £15.

New talent in county town Taste of Fame

TOP 80s musical Fame will be performed by a new group of youngsters looking to make a break in the entertainment industry. More than 70 young aspiring performers from Kent have been called back to star in this year's show after a huge audition at the Hazlitt Arts Centre in Maidstone. Youth theatre leader Paul Foster said: "Lots of our older members have left to pursue a career in the arts or have gained a place in some of the top drama schools and universities around the UK, so we were able to take on a lot of new people. The successful auditionees will star in the show from Tuesday, October 25, to Saturday, October 29.

Adapt just one wall to add all the extra space you could need to your home

Being cooped up indoors all winter may just highlight a need for more space. If you don't want to move house, though, give some thought to adding another room to your property instead.

The contemporary orangeries from Elephant are entirely bespoke and an ideal way to introduce more space without having to sacrifice your garden.

Choosing a wall of Elephant's bi-folding aluminium doors means the space has a dual function: close them and you gain an indoor dining room, playroom or kitchen; leave them open and your garden becomes an extension of your living space.

Because Elephant manufactures everything itself, you can pick different colour finishes for the inside and out to ensure the orangery complements your home.

Elephant will project-manage the whole thing, from lighting to landscaping, so taking a massive weight off your mind.

Conservatories are one of the best ways to give your home that all-important light and airy feeling.

As a place to relax with large windows, they allow a view out to the garden, so increasing the idea of space in the home and making a connection between the interior and exterior space.

They are also ideal for entertaining, especially in the summer months when doors can be left open, making for a seamless transition between the home and the outside, enabling the party or other social event to spill out of the house into the sunshine.

With the addition of plants and carefully-arranged furniture, they can add markedly to the style and individuality of any home as well as considerably increasing its value.

The addition of a drinks cabinet is always welcome, especially when the room is used for entertaining guests, and a dining table can also be used to give something of an alfresco feel to meals taken in the room rather than in a more formal home setting.

Elephant staff are experts in providing exactly what is needed to give the home that little bit extra when it comes to conservatories with style.

The company has a wealth of experience and has seen how changing fashions in home design can be incorporated into the different styles offered to give each design its unique points and make each creation something to be admired – the final results being a proud addition to any house.

- All projects are bespoke.
- Frames and roofs are all manufactured at Elephant's factory and are available in any colour in either PVC-u or aluminium.
- Top-of-the-range solar-control glass with self-cleaning is available.
- Elephant has almost 40 years of experience.
- All products are guaranteed for 10 years.
- The project is managed from start to finish.

Christmas comes early if you buy from this house-builder

HOMEBUYERS in Kent who reserve a Bovis home in October will find an extra present under the Christmas tree to help make the festive budget stretch that little bit further.

That's because the housebuilder will be leaving £500 of vouchers to spend at John Lewis or Waitrose which could pay for presents for family and friends or all the festive food and drink needed to celebrate a new life in a new home.

Bovis Homes is offering the vouchers to all those who reserve a home at one of its developments in Ashford, Hawkinge, Minster on Sheppey and Sittingbourne and move in before the end of the year.

These developments include Chestnut Place, Liberty Green, Abbey Place and Meadowbank at Great Easthall Farm.

"It may seem a bit early to start thinking about Christmas, but for new homebuyers, now is the time to make that reservation," said Bovis Homes marketing director Kevin Wilkins.

"If you reserve a Bovis home this month you could be in by Christmas and celebrating the festive season in style courtesy of our special John Lewis package.

"We'd like to invite all homebuyers in the area to get in touch and we'll be able to discuss the various purchase-assistance schemes we have that can help them make the move and take advantage of this Christmas offer."

Joint scheme is finished early

CONSTRUCTION company Denne has completed a housing development in Hillborough, Herne Bay.

The 26 semi-detached and terraced properties in Neville Way are all available to buy on the open market.

A joint venture between Denne and Kitewood Estates, these new homes offer the best in modern living and are just half a mile from the town centre, while also being close to the sea.

The properties have two or three bedrooms and have either a garage or an allocated parking space.

Denne worked closely with the engineers, Knapp Hicks, to deliver the second phase of the development several months ahead of schedule following significant demand for the houses after the completion of phase one.

Graham Brown, Denne

managing director, said: "We are delighted to see this successful project come to fruition – and so much earlier than originally scheduled.

"Having worked very closely with the local community throughout this project, we hope we have achieved a development that will breathe new life into Herne Bay."

Prior to completion, Denne was also selected as the preferred development partner by Canterbury City Council for the £50 million mixed-use redevelopment of a council-owned car park in Herne Bay.

Initial proposals for the site include a 60,000 sq ft food store, additional retail space, a medical centre and residential apartments.

Work will begin on the new project in 2012.

SLK boasts air of quality

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MERCEDES-BENZ launched a game-changer by unveiling its SLK sports car in 1996.

It boasted a folding hard-top since emulated by many other car-makers – most successfully by Mazda's MX-5 CC.

But the German prestige roadster was not such a big hit for driver experience. With a so-so chassis and the offer of auto box only, the SLK was written off as rather effete.

That changed with the Mark II in 2004. Available with manual and auto and given a snout inspired by the legendary Mercedes-Benz SLR McLaren supercar, it looked neater and drove much better than its stilted predecessor.

However, it faced stiff competition from BMW's comparatively ugly Z4 and the much-lauded Porsche Boxster.

Nevertheless, good sales and robust used values voted it a success and the marque followed up earlier this year with a third-generation car.

The newcomer draws the eye, though its heavier look moves the car away from what SLK stands for – it translates from German as sporty, light and short.

Dealers won't be concerned, though, since the new SLK appears to be drawing in buyers who haven't previously shopped for the brand.

What they get is that superb all-weather roof – roof-up, you really wouldn't know you are in a convertible – excellent build quality and all the latest tech, including Aircscarf heater ducts built into the headrests, pioneered on the previous SLK.

The folding hard-top roof is also now made of glass and can be set to light or dark; the former suggests open-air motoring even when the elements are closed out, while blackout mode keeps the full heat of the sun off when parked or

The Mercedes SLK 200 is now in its third incarnation and appears to have hit the right note with buyers who haven't previously shopped for the brand when you need to travel roof-up with the air-con at full blast.

Of course, you might also need the latter mode when travelling with a full load of luggage, since the folded roof has to park itself somewhere and that does steal some boot space as well as leaving a pretty narrow aperture for loading.

But you forgive such practical difficulties for the warm feeling that washes over when you are driving the SLK.

The test car was the £35,500 200 AMG Sport Auto AMG trimmed model, which wears stunning alloys, but all SLK models (from £29,980) come well-equipped.

The cockpit is well-appointed and arranged and comes with leather seats as standard at this level. With roof down and side-windows up, plus Aircscarf wafting around you, the car feels refined – only rain will make you want to hit the roof retractor/opener on the armrest.

There is a fair bit of cockpit stowage, too, for a two-seater. But does it walk the talk?

Yes and no; while the SLK feels more taut and robust than before, it has lost some of the previous car's nimbleness. To be fair, that is partly due to M-B's impressive desire to make its cars as green as possible, so all current SLK models wear the marque's low-emission BlueEfficiency eco badge with pride.

That means you can potter around in your 181bhp 1.8-litre in Eco mode and average more than 40mpg, but you will want Sport mode to get you near the official 0-62mph in seven seconds. The seven-speed auto box is a nifty changer and you can also drive in manual mode via the stick shift or steering-wheel paddles.

The level of grip is good, but the SLK's steering feedback is set up more for town posing, while the car itself feels a bit ponderous with this powertrain; keen drivers will want the extra grunt of the 44-grand 303bhp 3.5-litre AMG Sport – surely an out and out performance flagship is in the offing, too?

MOTORING NEWS

Orders open for VW Up!

VOLKSWAGEN has just opened order books for its innovative and cheeky new Up! city car, due here in the spring, priced from £7,995.

It actually lives 'up' to the usual claim made in this sector by offering big car space on a compact body that also happens to be more stylish and practical than the model it replaces, the Fox.

A Mii too from Seat cousins

SEAT, the Spanish arm of the VW group, has produced a spin-off from the Up! that allows the marque to re-enter the city-car sector for the first time since the Arosa (1997-2004).

With several styling differences from the Up!, the new Mii is also due next spring. Prices are not being quoted yet, but expect it to undercut the VW.

Skoda won't be Up!staged

CZECH marque Skoda has been quick on the Up!take, too, launching the Citigo next summer – its first venture into the city-car sector.

Again, it differs slightly in looks from the Up!, but Skoda's aim will be to offer best value and running costs against in-house and outside rivals.

Expect a big battle in the baby-car market.

Ford shrugs off hard time to retain UK's top status

FORD was the clear UK market-leader in a difficult September – the month when new-car sales are boosted significantly by the registration-plate change.

With business confidence low, though, September was 0.8 per cent down on September 2010, according to motor-industry body the SMMT, and Ford was one of many carmakers that lost ground.

However, the UK leader continues to outperform rivals long term, currently maintaining a market share of 15.2 per cent so far this year – 0.1 of a percentage point up compared with the same period 12 months ago.

The Ford Fiesta supermini, pictured below, and the Ford Focus range were number one and two respectively at the top of the UK car sales chart for September and the year to date.

The Transit van, pictured, continues to top the UK commercial-vehicle charts, holding a quarter of the medium CV sector and having enjoyed a staggering leap from sales of 34,683 from January to September 2010, against 44,765 over the same period this year.

Other Ford stars were the five- and seven-seat Ford C-Max MPV and the bigger seven-seat Galaxy.

Ford of Britain managing director Mark Oven-den said: "In an intensely competitive market we are delighted with the overall balance of demand for our best-ever vehicle range."

"The Ford Fiesta, Ford Focus and Ford Transit stand out as vehicles of huge appeal to UK customers. Customers are recognising the outstanding value provided by these vehicles, and the entire Ford range."

NEW KID ON THE BLOCK:

Renault is about to unleash its new electric city car, the Twizy, on the UK public in March

City-slicker Twizy here soon

RENAULT has confirmed its quirky-looking electric tandem Twizy city car will arrive in the UK next March, and revealed there will now be three trim options.

Prices start at just £6,690, with a monthly battery hire from £40. The Urban is the lead-in model with the new Colour trim (£6,950) sitting between that and the top-of-the-range Technic (£7,400).

These prices look considerably cheaper against conventional-looking electric cars, costing at least £20,000.

Standard kit on the Twizy includes a charging cable, heated tinted windscreen and onboard computer and dashboard with econometer and battery consumption display.

With its weight low down and instant torque or pulling power from its electric motors, Renault reckons the Twizy can give far more expensive cars, white-van man and taxis a run for their money in urban use.

Apart from fast acceleration, it can also reach up to 50 mph and will take a full recharge in just three and a half hours, to deliver a range of 60 miles.
